There is a threat to country's security due to poverty, food scarcity, mass illiteracy and widespread diseases. India has traversed the period after Independence with great strides. We can be proud of our achievement but still there is a longer way to go. Literacy rate being relatively low and there is a large scale of nutrition deficiencies among rural children and women besides inadequate access to clean drinking water, sanitation and primary health facilities. For many people, working at far off places has become a cause of problems from ill health and stress to the breakdown of family life. We are concerned more about material needs and civilization is given less importance. He quoted that Mahatma Gandhiji laid great emphasis on moral and spiritual values. He added that the way to happiness is through renunciation and self imitation. We lack universal values and we are threatened by insecurity, fear and mistrust. One who disregards Dharma and ignores moral values, lose the peace of mind. We should have principles and ideals in life to make it a successful one. He quoted Nehru's words which stated that 'the service of India means the service of the millions who suffer'.
